INDUSTRIAL SECTION

HON. AUGUSTUS E. WILLSON

Governor of Kentucky—"The Man From Maysville."

Augustus E. Willson, Kentucky's brilliant and distinguished Governor, was born in Maysville in 1845. It is an axiom that "the Man From Maysville" can be found in every section of the world, and it is peculiarly appropriate that he should be found in the Commonwealth's executive chair. Governor Willson is not only a Maysville man, but so is the Lieutenant Governor, Hon. W. H. Cox, and Maysville is honored in a dual and marked manner in having two of her sons filling the highest State offices.

Governor Willson is happily married, Mrs. Willson presiding with grace and dignity over the gubernatorial mansion at Frankfort. The Governor is a recognized orator and wit and his ready ability and eloquence make him one of the most popular after-dinner speakers in the United States. As a lawyer, statesman and wise Christian gentleman he has few equals in this country, and his native city, State and the people are fortunate that they have such a man to guide their destinies and to uphold the laws.

HON. WILLIAM H. COX

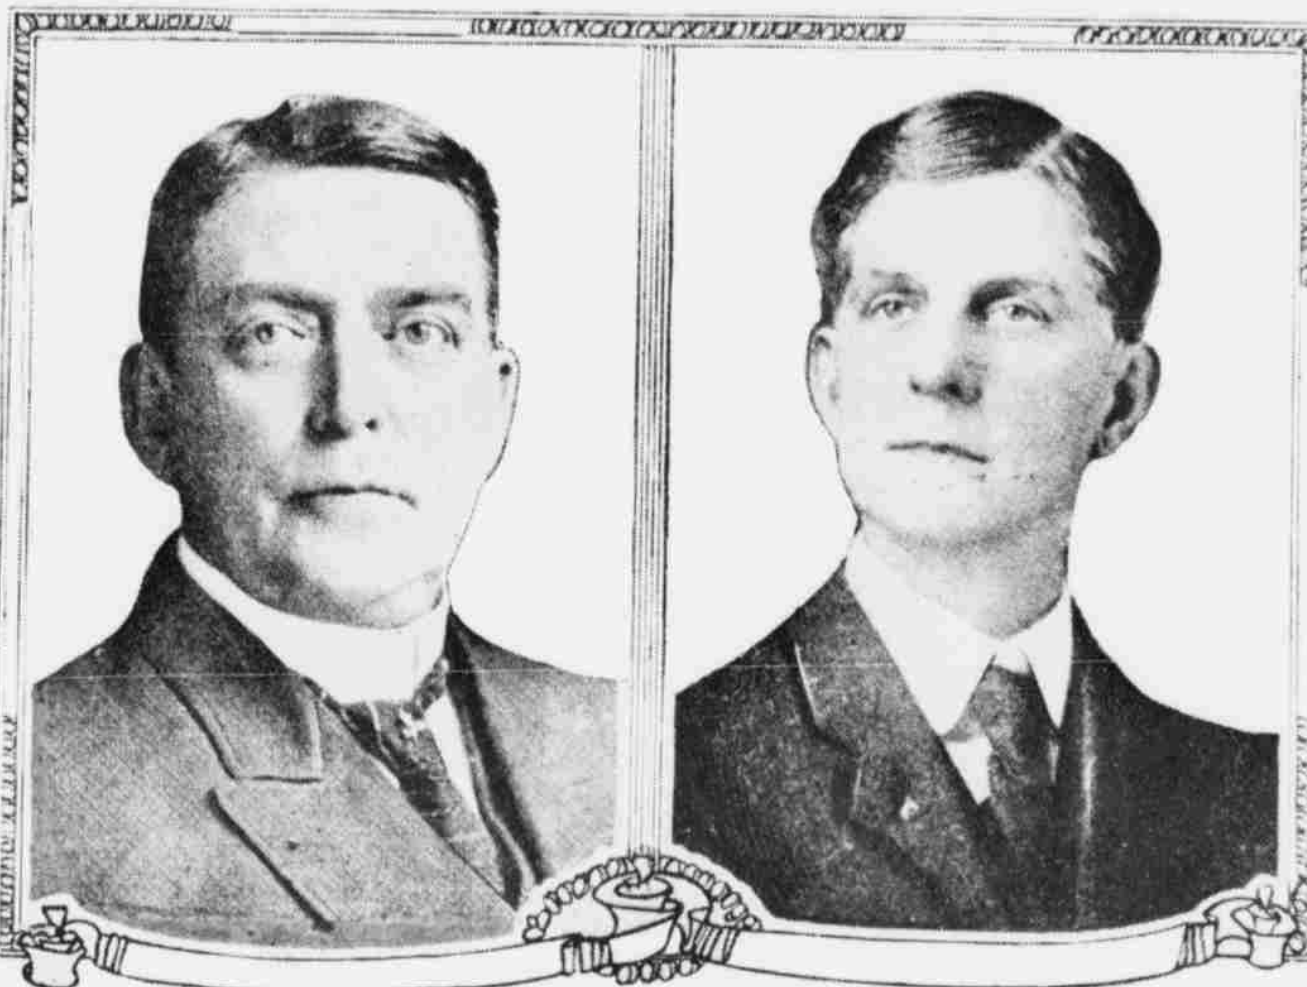

Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky.

Hon. William Hopkinson Cox was born in Maysville in 1856 and received his education in the Public Schools. His grandfather, the late George Cox, was one of the wealthy and pioneer dry-goods merchants of Kentucky, and the Maysville house, established in 1819, was considered the most reputable concern of its kind in the West. Mr. Cox and his brother, Mr. Geo. L. Cox, succeeded to the business on the death of their father, selling out the store in 1902 to D. Hunt & Son, but still owning the building.

William H. Cox is known as Maysville's most progressive citizen, having spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in real estate investments and new buildings. He erected and owns the Masonic Temple Building, known as the Cox Building, and the Cox row of residences in Market and Fourth streets, which are recognized as the
